Robot receptionist

BY ERIC ZIGLIN | TUESDAY, JANUARY 5TH 2016

Nadine works as a receptionist at Singapore’s Nanyang Technological University. The only unusual thing about this receptionist is she’s a robot.

Nadine looks and acts just like a human receptionist. The robot even exhibits personality, moods and emotions.

Made to look human, Nadine has long dark hair and is named after its creator, Professor Nadia Thalmann.

Nadine is powered by software similar to Apple’s Siri, meaning it can act as a personal assistant or companion.

How would you feel if you were greeted by a robot instead of a human? Sound off on our KEYE-TV Facebook (www.facebook.com/keyetv) page.
